Since beginning his professional career in 2003, Arbitrator Casillas has developed extensive experience in labor relations through a diverse career as a labor attorney, neutral, and academic. For over ten years, Arbitrator Casillas worked in private practice as a labor-side attorney, representing various unions throughout Washington State in areas ranging from contract negotiations to grievance arbitration and unfair labor practice hearings. While on sabbatical from private practice, Arbitrator Casillas pursued his graduate studies at Cornell University, earning an M.A. in 2009 and a Ph.D. in Government in 2012. During his time at Cornell, Arbitrator Casillas completed coursework at the distinguished School of Industrial and Labor Relations.

In 2018, Arbitrator Casillas transitioned to a neutral with the Washington State Public Employment Relations Commission (PERC) as an administrative law judge, mediator, and trainer. As a PERC staff member, he has handled dozens of cases each year involving issues with unfair labor practice charges, grievances, representation questions, fact-finding, and mediation. In conjunction with his career with PERC, Arbitrator Casillas is also a member of the adjunct faculty at both Seattle University School of Law and the University of Washington School of Law. At both institutions, Arbitrator Casillas teaches labor law in the private and public sectors, negotiation theory and practice, arbitration law, as well as a variety of constitutional law courses.
